

A Practical Grammar of the Antient Gaelic, or Language of the Isle of Mann (Classic Reprint)

My Lord, Popular favour, in different countries, arises from different causes; and rare will be the felicity of that man who has acquired universal admiration. Your Lordship's humanity in Ireland, amidst the cruelties of civil war, is recorded in history; the courage which you displayed on the plains of Lincelles, and the wounds which you received on the sand-banks of Holland, have rendered you dear to England; whilst a sociable disposition, a love of your native country, an attachment to your people, their customs, and their language, have made you the pride and boast of Scotland. An author, desirous of pleasing a patron for the antient Celtic, whether distinguished by the appellation of Welsh, Scots, Irish, or Manx, would certainly chuse the most popular Nobleman in his Majesty's dominions. How fortunate, therefore, is it for me, that as I am in my choice, that such a Nobleman I should be your Lordship, over whose youth I have watched with anxious solicitude, and whose mind I have endeavoured to adorn with every good, every honourable principle! With an honest pride, therefore, I place this work under your Lordship's protection. (Typographical errors above are due to OCR software and do not occur in the book.)
