

Eyewitness to World War II: The Best of American Heritage (The American Heritage Library)

Every month, writes an American Heritage editor, a flood of first-person accounts of the Second World War reaches the magazines offices. It is a seemingly endless flow and endlessly interesting, he goes on, for each persons view of the event witnessed is different from every other persons. World War II is an old story only if you have read the same version before... The eyewitness accounts of the war that follow, from the pages of American Heritage, are indeed unique. Each of the men (and in the case of Rosie the Riveter Remembers each of the women) witnessed the war as an individual and from an individuals perspective. These perspectives are enormously varied - that of a general in the field and an admiral on the bridge, that of a Marine corporal, a seaman second class, a mess cook, a civilian caught in the trap of war. Some are the vital raw materials of history. Others are thoughtful and expert interpretations that comprise the stuff of history. Everyone in these pages was there - seeing, recording, remembering, and adding to our store of knowledge of this greatest war in history. [From the Introduction]
