

The Hat-in-the-Ring Squadron: The 94th Fighter Squadron History

THE HAT-IN-THE-RING SQUADRON
The 94th Fighter Squadron History Robert F. Dorr When the public thinks of American air power in the First World War, the image that immediately comes to mind is the Hat in the Ring emblem that became possibly the best-known squadron badge in U.S. history. Today, tossing a hat into a ring has become the term for announcing a political candidacy, but in the early years of this century the act signified readiness for a fight. Unfortunately, the United States was not nearly as ready to fight as this impudent symbol suggested. The 94th Aero Squadron came into being at Kelly Field, Texas, on August 20, 1917, and went to Europe as part of the 1st Pursuit Group. In 10,200 words, military aviation historian Robert F. Dorr provides an overview of the squadrons century-long service.
