

A Journey in Southern Siberia

A Journey in Southern Siberia

by Jeremiah Curtin
[1909]

Kindle Edition published by Evinity Publishing Inc, 2009.

Jeremiah Curtin, writer, polyglot, ethnographer and folklorist, travelled in 1900 to central Siberia to study the religion and folklore of the Buryat people. The Buryats are one branch of the Mongols, who at one point conquered a large swath of Asia, Europe and India. Their home is around Lake Baikal in central Siberia. The first third of this book is a travelogue which describes Curtin's Siberian journey; this is a fascinating glimpse at Tsarist Siberia just before the Revolution. The last two-thirds of the book is an extraordinary record of the mythology of the Buryats. The lore is of great interest, resembling in its fluid, dreamlike narrative the Native American tales. There are many elements found elsewhere through Asia and Europe such as epic horses (and horse sacrifices), battles with giants, a World-mountain and the water of life, (see The Epic of Gilgamesh). There are also unique elements such as heroes with oracular books embedded in their bodies. This one of the last of Curtin's books, published after his death in 1906.--J.B. Hare
