

Tropical Palms, Portraits and Rain: The Guyana Flood of 2005

It is my hope that readers in this small world will share in this odyssey. Floods can be devastating. When the water bears the stillness as a washing tide, slow destruction follows. The flood waters in Georgetown, Guyana, of January 2005 gave no notice. I am here to share with you bleak, bright, and nostalgic moments during this period of the Great Flood of 2005. I pledge to paint a picture that will share the grief, but will capture the essence of the pure human spirit during and after this tragedy.
