

NIGHT COMBAT ON THE HO CHI MINH TRAIL (Short Story)

Its hairy work, flying night interdiction in an F-4 Phantom job for real pros. The weather, the built-in hazards of night refueling, target identification, and the mountains hiding in the dark are all enemies and of course, theres the enemy, too. These pilots have a saying, And if the big guns dont get you, the black karst will. But then back on top in the moonlight, a man finds brief moments to think his own thoughts before cracking a low ceiling back at home base. It is all part of a NIGHT MISSION ON THE HO CHI MINH TRAIL by Mark Berent. See his books on Kindle about fighter pilots and the politics of the Vietnam war.
