An excerpt from the book: Turmeric (Cucura Longa) is an herb, with long narrow leaves and yellow to reddish trumpet shaped flowers. It is indigenous to India and South Asia, and is a member of the ginger family. Curcumin is the active phytochemical ingredient of this plant. Curcumin is the active element in turmeric that prevents disease, infection and protects it from insects. Turmeric root (rhizomes) is used as a spice and is the main ingredient of curry, often referred to as Indian saffron. Curry is the main ingredient of many Eastern style entrees. Asian Indian people have used turmeric for thousands of years as a spice, a beauty enhancer, an insect repellent, as a purifier and sanitizing agent and sunscreen. One of turmeric's primary uses is its dyeing properties that are bright yellow to reddish in color. It is still used today in enhancing food color. Buddhist monks used the dye to color their bright yellow robes. Eastern Indian women mix turmeric with lime juice to create that bright red dot they place in the center of their foreheads for luck.
