CHAPTER II. OFFICIAL DUTIES OF ELDERS VIEWED INDIVIDUALLY--EACH t HIS DISTRICT -- DISTRICT ROLL-BOOK VISITATION OF CHURCH MEMBERS--VISITATION OF THE SICK--EXPOSTULATION WITH OFFENDERS--ATTENTIONS TO THE YOUNG-- PRATER MEETINGS. Sect. 1.--Each elder should have a portion of the congregation, residing within a defined district, committed to his special superintendence. An arrangement of this character is absolutely indispensable to the good of the church. If all the elders have charge of all the members, each will trust to another; and the infallible result will be, that congregational duty will fall into confusion and neglect. Let no elder, then, want his district; without it he is a sentinel at large, or, in other words, no sentinel at all. The district of each elder should be of such extent as he can effectively overtake. If it be too large, he will not do it justice ; and when he cannot do all the duty, he will find a ready excuse for not dcJng almost any duty, and for discharging his whole trust in a negligent and cursory manner. A precise rule is not attainable in such cases, because elders have very different measures of time at their command; and what is moderation for one, might be excess for another ; but, generally speaking, no elder should be charged with the inspection of more than twenty, or, at the most, twenty-five families. Sect. 2.--Each elder, to whose care a section of the congregation has been assigned, should also have a district roll-book. Some might get on without it; but in most cases it is necessary, and in all cases useful. This roll should not be a meagre list of names. The bounds of the district, with the localities it comprehends, should be first of all stated. After the names of the members, their place of residence, their occupa1 ti...
