The contention of the author is that all Bernards writings have, in one way or another, a prophetic-reforming purpose. First, Bernards prophetic-reforming work as Abbot is considered. Also examined is the extent to which Bernard not only formed future leaders with a similar reforming vision as his own, but also how he used windows of opportunity and circles of influence to further his prophetic-reforming aims through others. This same prophetic-reforming can offer a valuable hermeneutic key for approaching an interpretation of Bernards writings.
